U.S. salutes Asian-Pacific Americans

The history of Asian-Pacific American Heritage Month (APAHM) dates back to June 1977 when Congressmen Frank Horton and Norman Y. Mineta introduced House Resolution 540 in the House of Representatives. It called for the president to proclaim the first week in May as Asian-Pacific American Heritage Week. The following month, Senators Daniel Inouye and Spark Matsunaga introduced similar legislation (Senate Joint Resolution 72) in the U.S. Senate. In October 1978 President Jimmy Carter signed Joint Resolution 72, officially declaring the first week in May as Asian-Pacific Heritage Week.

Twelve years later, in May 1990, President George W. Bush signed a proclamation expanding the week-long celebration into a month. Two years later, on Oct. 23, 1992, the 102nd Congress unanimously approved House Resolution 5572 permanently designating May as Asian-Pacific American Heritage Month and President George W. Bush signed the resolution into law.

The Asian-Pacific American Heritage Council (APAHC) chose "Salute to Liberty" as this year's national theme.

The APAHC was formed in 1979 to bring together existing Asian-Pacific ethnic organizations.

The common denominator among the various Asian and Pacific communities is pride in their distinct heritages and a desire to increase awareness of their diversity by coming socially proactive. Today well-known American corporations support several annual events promoting Asian-Pacific diversity.

Army's Special Emphasis Program Contributions of Asian-Pacific Americans celebrated at Pentagon

Whatever one's ethnic or cultural background, becoming a visible and humble part of America was encouraged at the annual Asian-Pacific American Heritage observance at the Pentagon on May 6.

"Recognizing a particular group works an awful lot toward making the work force aware of each other and treating each better," said Jim Halloran, the manager of the Army's Special Emphasis Program.

Celebrations like the one at the Pentagon highlight Asian-Pacific Americans' contributions to the country in sports, theater, politics and the military, said Maj. Gen. Antonio M. Taguba, the acting director of the Army Staff. He mentioned golf great Tiger Woods whose mother is Thai, Sen. Daniel Inouye from Hawaii and Army Chief of Staff Gen. Eric Shinseki as examples of Asian-Pacific Americans contributing to the well-being of the country.

Born in Manila, the son of a retired sergeant first class, the general said he had personal experiences of racism and the fight for acceptance. His parents passed toleration and promise on to their children and grandchildren, he said.

"They're my heroes," he said of them.

Taguba also said that education is the key to success in this country and that the Asian-Pacific American community must continue to assimilate into society.

"But we still need to be visible and humble because that's the American way of doing things," Taguba said.

The celebration is one of numerous held every year hosted by the Directorate of Equal Employment Opportunity's Office for Special Emphasis Programs. Other celebrations include Native American Heritage Month in November, Black History Month in February, Women's History Month in March, Women's Equality Day Aug. 26 and Hispanic Heritage Month from Sept. 15 to Oct. 15.

Halloran also organizes the monthly displays throughout the Pentagon that commemorate the observances.
